DURING VACATION

1. Keep your child engaged in physical activities.

A break from school results in less physical activity for children. However, every child must spend at least 60 minutes engaged in physical activity. Therefore, enrolling your child in swimming classes, karate, yoga, or other sports is a good way to keep them busy and engaged. A healthy child is a happy child.

3. Take your kid on a trip

There is no better way to push your children out of their comfort zone than by taking them on an adventure. Plan a trip with your children during the summer vacation and let them discover the world around them. Encourage them to try out new foods, talk to new people, and adapt their culture to appreciate the diversity of the world they live in. You will create memories for a lifetime on this trip, and your kids will fondly look back on these days even after growing up.

4. Engage them in extracurricular classes

Summer vacation are good time for kids to indulge themselves in exploring and developing new hobbies and interests. Based on their preferences, you could send your child to drawing classes or enrol him in dance/music classes. If he is linguistically gifted, you could teach him a new language too.

5. Tell kids about your family

Summer vacation is the perfect time for kids to learn about their families. Inform them about their relationship with other relatives and family members whom they don't know or have not met. To make this session more interesting, they can make a family tree on paper or on the computer.

'Bonding Retreats'- During the summer break, besides the heritage sites, parents can also take their child for visit to the below mentioned fascinating and informative places in the city . Such efforts not only help build memories but also foster emotional closeness between parents and children –
